01. Kindergarten & primary school

Kindergarten activities include brief moments of play and interaction with the artworks, where children are accompanied in the active exploration of the exhibitions. Activities are framed in two phases: observation and narration. Children are invited to dwell on the images, analyzing their details and shapes, while practicing their verbal skills in descriptions. They familiarize then with the images while learning how to sharpen their gaze in identifying key elements of the artwork.

Primary school activities, on the other hand, engage children in observing the artworks, raising questions and stimulating narration. Art becomes a springboard for imagining stories and developing critical, expository and speculative skills. Children become familiar with the language of painting, the history of the artwork and the artist. They are also involved in an exercise of imagination, by making up a story about one of the paintings.

ACTIVITIES CHRONORAMA

AMONG US / CHRONORAMA

For Secondary School Students

The Chronorama exhibition presents photos that were published in Condé Nast magazines throughout the 20th century: it takes students on a journey across the century, through the lens of fashion and style.

The images exhibited accompanied written articles and stories, and the class, organised into small groups, is likewise inspired to produce texts and images that reflect their own point of view. The creative process is sparked by observation of the works and discussion and comparison within the groups.

CLIL CONTENT AND LANGUAGE INTEGRATED LEARNING

The students bring their knowledge and language skills into play in relation to contemporary art themes: a visit to the exhibitions is an opportunity to learn specific vocabulary and test their expressive skills in the context of the museum. The activity involves each group focusing on a different semantic field and, in relation to the works, producing texts of various kinds, whether narrative, poetic or descriptive.
