MYTHOLOGIES AMÉRICAINES

A new exhibition season
featuring

MIKE KELLEY / LEE LOZANO / MIRA SCHOR / SER SERPAS

From 13 October 2023 to 19 February 2024

With the retrospective devoted to Mike Kelley's work, the Lee Lozano exhibition, and the installations by Ser Serpas and Mira Schor, this new season explores and deconstructs various "American mythologies".

Beginning in the 1960s with Lee Lozano, the 1970s and 1980s for Mira Schor and Mike Kelley, and 2010s-2020s for Ser Serpas, these artists in the Pinault Collection together paint a portrait of America and its myths ranging from the acerbic to the disenchanting, through an array of subjects that address contemporary society as a whole.

Mike Kelley, Lee Lozano, Ser Serpas, and Mira Schor share an affinity for countercultures, which are perceived at once as radical forms of protest within which to situate themselves, and as a locus of failure and shattered illusions, and which they ultimately use to create works that speak to both the collective and the individual. "Myths are public dreams, dreams are private myths", wrote the American mythologist Joseph Campbell, a chiasmus that illustrates the overturning of major narratives in mainstream culture when experienced at a smaller scale, thereby revealing the individual opinions that seek to pick its clichés apart. Motifs recur from one exhibition to the other: an obsession with the body, masks, and skin, with appearances and simulacra, showcasing what is discarded and what is side-lined, the literal multiplication of layers of interpretation and the use of profusion to convey a message to an audience, and the use of forms that originate in protest, such as performance.

The exhibitions Lee Lozano (Gallery 2), Mira Schor (Studio) and Ser Serpas (Gallery 3) will close on 22 January 2024. The Rotunda and second floor galleries will remain open until 19 February 2024 for the Mike Kelley exhibition.

MIKE KELLEY Ghost and Spirit

Tate Modern, London, Bourse de Commerce—Pinault Collection, Paris, K21 Kunstsammlung Nordrhein-Westfalen, Düsseldorf, and Moderna Museet, Stockholm, have joined forces to present a major retrospective of the work of Mike Kelley, a key figure on the Californian scene during the decades 1980s, 1990s, and 2000s.

This artist who defies categorisation is among the most influential of the late twentieth century. His work formulates a critique of American society and its aberrations, oscillating between trashiness and a pop aesthetic, juggling between high culture, popular culture, and counter-culture. Appropriating and combining every technique (performance, music, drawing, painting, sculpture, installation, photography, and video), Mike Kelley invented and blazed his own artistic trail, one which has inspired several generations of artists. Disturbing rather than provocative, he takes on symbols, icons, and elements of individual and collective memory which he filters through his own practice, with a perspective that is at times unhinged, touching, irreverent, and melancholic.

The exhibition presents some of his most famous works, such as the Kandors Full Set (sculptures inspired by the Superman comic strip), which make up a spectacular installation, but also more intimate and fragile works which critique social, cultural, and family conditioning. Mike Kelley asked himself: after death, do we become a mere ghost whose memory fades, or an inspiring, commanding spirit whose influence remains alive? The visitors of this new retrospective will find their own answers to this question.
